BOOM

A SERIAL DRAMA

ABOUT THE SHOW

Boom: A Serial Drama is a fictional podcast, about loss, recovery, and relationships.

It is the flagship podcast series from Observer Pictures, an independent short film and podcast production company based in Nashville, Tenn. founded by Faith McQuinn.

Porter, a computer technician and outdoor enthusiast, must come to terms with the murder of his best friend, and love of his life, Genevieve. It's far from an easy road. Porter suffers through a long physical recovery and an even more difficult mental one. The lead detective on the case believes Porter is the killer, and his two best friends are trying their hardest to get him back to the guy he once was. But after all that he goes through during his recovery, Porter will never be the same again.

Boom is serialized and should be listened to from the beginning. The first three seasons plus all the bonus episodes are available now. Season 4 episodes are being released every two weeks on Friday. The transcripts for season one are available at observerpictures.com/BoomEpisodes.html

Trigger Warning: Some episodes contain violence in the form of bodily attacks, property destruction, and threats with a gun. The main character experiences disturbing dreams.

THE CREW

Faith McQuinn
writer/director

Faith has been a writer and video editor for since 2005. She spent nine years teaching film production and screenwriting at the college level. After years of helping other people bring their stories to life, she decided to start Observer Pictures with the intent of making a new project every year. To date, she's produced four short films and two fiction podcasts.

Amanda Lorraine producer/assistant director

Amanda has been intrigued with storytelling ever since her mom and Nanny introduced her to "stories" (aka soap operas). Through college and after, she's been on the producing team for multiple short films. She met Faith in college where their teacher-student relationship transformed into a creative duo when she joined Observer Pictures.

PRESS AND REVIEWS

Boom is a featured show in the Modern Radio Drama list on Apple Podcasts. It was featured on the Trending Podcasts page on Radio Public in October 2019. Boom has also appeared on Best of Lists from Bello Collective, AudioDramaRama, and Audio Dramatic.

"Boom has always been the most anxiety-inducing thriller podcast on my list, and the third season did not hold back on the tension, when it could have easily dropped away....[T]he third season showcases not only McQuinn's tight scripting and the voice actors' immense talents, but the research and care taken in portraying subjects like the legal system, PTSD, and recovery from trauma."

-Elena Fernández-Collins, Audio Dramatic

"I was ripped to pieces and put back together only to be ripped to pieces again by the fantastic drama "Boom" ...[I]t'll grip you in episode 1 and prove its premise in episode 2 and 3."

-StationBluePod, Twitter Review

"This story, from the beginning, hands you characters you can't help but get attached to, a story you have to know the end of, and a portrayal of trauma that's honest and heartbreaking without being condescending."
